IN MY GARDEN by Lesley Gillanders

Autumn days are with us again with all of our gardens clothed in their red, gold, orange or yellow regalia. Lardizabala biternata adds another colour – brown. This has an attractive raceme of several flowers opening from pea sized buds with slight overtones of reddish brown which is accented by creamy white stamens. An unusual climber from Chile but not to everyone's taste as some people prefer more spectacularly coloured flowers.

The first of our Crocus have a few flowers open on this sunny day. C. longiflorus with blue flowers, C. mathewii with pale whitish blue blooms which Ken raised from seed, C. oreoreticus has also appeared plus a white Crocus whose name has been lost but an unnamed bulb such as this one is also welcome and will one day be identified.

We have searched all catalogues for Sternbergia lutea. Over the years we have had it and lost it but alas it is not to be found these days. Unfortunately we left them behind when we moved. A friend had a few and she generously insisted on presenting us with 4 bulbs. Their lovely golden yellow goblets are one of the most eye catching flowers at this time of year. The colour is a bright contrast to the intense deep blue of the perennial Salvia patens. We also have a larger growing Salvia called S. 'Limelight' reaching to one and a half metres. The 20cm long lime green panicles of bracts from which the deep blue flowers emerge are quite elegant after the flowers drop off and I have seen a large brown honeyeater swaying on the numerous branches getting nectar. Unfortunately some of the branches tend to snap off in strong winds.

Cynoglossum amabile made a spectacular sight in China with drifts of flowers on the high mountain plains. In our gardens it is better behaved with intense blue flowers but beware the seeds, as they have tiny hooks on the edge of the round seeds and attach themselves to any passing socks or herds of yaks which fortunately we do not have.

Cyclamen mirabile has a few pink flowers in one of our troughs. The leaves are variable but the renowned pink dusting or sometimes spots or speckling on the young leaves in some forms is quite desirable. C. graecum not only has a large number of pink flowers open in a trough and in a bed near the greenhouse but the leaves are spectacularly marbled and have a velvety appearance. The garden opposite the back door, which was created to eliminate the steep steps, is being changed again. Not that the blackbirds have won but the few plants grown under the Cherries did not come on well and we have lost a few bulbs due to the roots of the trees. It will now be replanted with Cyclamen hederifolium and C. coum. There will still be Anemone blanda, some Galanthus and Trillium left in place but the overall picture envisaged will be the Cyclamen.

I thought all our Lilium species had finished flowering but L. philippinense from the Philippines, is standing tall to one and a half metres high with large pendulous buds ready to open. There is a pinkish magenta stripe on the reverse of the petals and the flowers are opening to a lovely creamy white trumpet with a light greenish throat.

The Paulownia kawakamii which was planted 18 months ago has surprised us with vigorous growth to about 4 metres high. The normal sequence for growing it is one single stem the first year planted, second year it branches and third year it will produce flowers. The ends of the branches on our young plant have flower buds coming. We hope they open before the frosts come as it is normally spring flowering. A friend likens the tree to the Magic Faraway Tree in the Enid Blyton stories. We are watching for the little people who live in it.

JOHN'S GARDEN

On the 6th April a sizeable group (including an overseas visitor) visited John Tooth's garden in Fern Tree and as could be expected we were not disappointed. What a delightful garden this is in any season. Impeccably manicured, with fresh, clear colours of Autumn around every corner. It is true that the majority of us made it right to the very depths of the garden and returned - well who was going to miss that scrumptious afternoon tea!

John was well prepared and had the room suitably arranged for our meeting and other activities. The topic for Gill's short talk was R. Christmas Cheer which unfortunately had not produced flowers for the occasion. However Gill did discover she had another variety which she believes definitely has Christmas Cheer in it's breeding. It is known as R. Christmas Baubles!
A very enjoyable afternoon - thank you John.

GARDEN GATHERING

11TH MAY 2014

'Greenslades' is the garden of Wyn and Rupert Manners at 4685 Channel Highway - 2 kms south of Middleton shop on the left hand side.

Time: 2pm. Please bring something for afternoon tea.

There will not be a meeting or any of our usual activities but we will have a raffle.

This is a large garden with a view of the d'Entrecasteaux Channel, showcasing a wide variety of trees, shrubs, perennials and more. It is well worth a visit. Wyn and Rupert have advised that parking would be best outside the property.

MEETING AND GARDEN GATHERING

8TH JUNE 2014

- ◆ Meeting
- ◆ Blooms competition
- ◆ Short talk by Lesley Eaton
- ◆ Since it is June and possibly too cold for garden viewing, we will have a DVD provided by Lorraine Grewcoe - A Season at Lambley - David Glenn's nursery and garden near Ballarat in Victoria.
There will also be, problems in the garden, raffle and an auction. Please consider bringing a contribution for the auction.
