IN MY GARDEN by Lesley Gillanders

I really thought I would not write this article in time. I will not be able to get inspiration from a quick walk in the garden. But from my hospital bed, with a good mental picture, I will give it a go. Ken tells me there are nice little flowers on a small daffodil until a snail found them, but not to be dismayed there are two more buds coming. It is Narcissus cantabricus petunioides, a little charmer. When Ken comes to visit each day my first question is "How are you?" followed by "What is in flower in the garden?"

A large patch of Galanthus plicatus gently swaying in the breeze makes a pretty picture. Unfortunately the same cannot be said for the strong winds over the last few days. There is a considerable difference in the size of the flowers in the Galanthus family. Our smallest one is G. nivalis, a delightful species, and we also have the double flowered form flora pleno. G. gracilis and G. rizehensis. All have the typical three petals with an inner tube which is sometimes green or with individual green markings. Some of the larger flowered ones we have are G. caucasicus, G. plicatus and G. "S. Arnott".

The Eranthis are making a good sized clump at the front of the house, they have to contend with some well grown Cyclamen hederifolium. There is a tub of them in full sunshine at the back of the house with not one flower. Ken says he will give them a drink.

Iris reticulata has several flowers open and different forms of it will flower in the next week - "George" is outstanding with its large flowers.

A new flower for us after losing it many years ago is Cyclamen pseudibericum. The leaves have a pewter sheen to them, and the flowers are scented and deep carmine. The first of the Narcissus cyclamineus are open, and in another week there will be a patch open near the creek. It is a sweet little daffodil with its turned back petals.

At Longley we could not grow Lachenalias as it was too cold. Here in Kingston we have a few flowers open on L. pendula and L. quadricolor.

Anyone with a plant of Daphne bholua will appreciate the intense fragrance of its flowers opening in mid winter. We have two plants 2 m high in full bloom, one near the greenhouse and the other on the side garden. Some trusses are open on Rhododendron "Cornubia". The strong winds wrecked the early ones but more are opening now. It is in the front garden where we lost R. "Taurus" a couple of years ago.

Camellia reticulata is also flowering there with lovely large red flowers.

If I get home from hospital I will type this article myself, if not Ken will type it. He will not guarantee to get it right, with no spelling mistakes, no italics for plant names but I am sure he will do a good job.

Editor's note: Well done Ken, and I'm pleased to say that Lesley is now home and recovering well.

Mid-year Luncheon - 8 members and partners met for lunch at the Huon Manor in Huonville where we enjoyed a pleasant meal and an afternoon of good company on a beautiful winter day.
